

Diversity that Works:

Preparing Students for Graduate School

Diversifying our graduate student cohorts is a necessary and laudable goal, but it's also the case that oftentimes applicants lack the basic preparation needed to begin graduate work in their chosen fields. Join UCLA professors Kara Cooney (Chair, Near Eastern Languages and Culture) and Muriel McClendon (Director of Graduate Studies, History) for a discussion of concrete steps departments can take to cultivate a prepared applicant pool.

KARA COONEY
Chair
Near Eastern Languages and Culture

MURIEL MCCLENDON
Director of Graduate Studies
History

THIS IS A HYBRID EVENT HELD IN PERSON AND ONLINE
PLEASE REGISTER IN ADVANCE

REGISTER TO ATTEND IN PERSON: HTTPS://BIT.LY/3JM6AOU

REGISTER TO ATTEND ONLINE: <https://bit.ly/3NrRmrb>

Thursday
April 14, 12-1 pm
Kaplan 193

Lunch will be provided for in-person attendees!

Future Events

May 4, 12-1 pm,
Admissions Rubrics

May 25, 12-1 pm,
Graduate Education for the 21st Century

This conversation is part of a series featuring UCLA faculty from UC's Alliance for Multicampus Inclusive Graduate Admissions (AMIGA).

HOLISTIC ADMISSIONS FOR
THE HUMANITIES @ UCLA