Fed Up: Jobs with the Federal Government

Have you always wanted to work for the government? Want to know how to achieve this goal?

April 11th | 04:00 p.m. - 05:30 p.m. | Royce Hall Room 314

Career/internship opportunities in the government are diverse, exciting, and highly competitive. In a continually growing global society, the United States has placed great importance on hiring talented individuals to protect the country's interests and grow its diplomatic efforts.

Join us for what will be an informative panel that will explore the career paths within various government agencies and how you can gain a competitive edge when applying for government opportunities. Guest speakers will include representatives from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the U.S. Department of State, the U.S. Department of Defense, and the Marine Officer Training Program.
